Week 3:

1. Send an invitation to your classmates to review one of your drafts. (See instructions in email and posted in Resource section below.)
2. Continue working on your standard statements and collecting artifacts and references.
3. Accept as many of your classmates' invitations to review their first draft of a standard as you can. If you run into a standard that has many reviews, continue on to one that has not received many comments so that everyone gets the benefit of a review. I will expect you to review a minimum of 3 drafts. The more reviews the more we learn from each other.

Week 2:

1. Your first assignment during the second week is to get some ideas outlined in all standards along with ideas on artifacts you could use. Do NOT attempt to write all standards right now. Just outline, make lists, and gather your thoughts. This should allow you to create a master list of artifacts and references you need to gather. Create a master list and then check them off as you find the assignments or create links to the artifacts.
2. By the end of this week your assignment is to get one standard into a draft form with link(s) to at least one artifact and abstract for that artifact. Use the Add Item to add your abstract and artifact. You will invite us to review that draft by January 28th. You may choose which ever standard you want to begin with. Standard 1 may not be the best standard for you to begin with. Once you have some ideas down for all the standards, you will be able to see which one seems logical for your first draft.

Week 1:

Assignment 1: Your first assignment is to enter the discussion forum and post a reply to my message. We will be working closely with each other, reviewing and editing each other's work so I'd like to know more about you. Also, I've asked you to share one concern you have as we begin our portfolios. Due January 21st.

Assignment 2: To set up your portfolio, work from the top level portfolio Web page and add 9 items (one for each standard and the summative statement). Click on Add New Item and enter the text of each standard into the abstract section. Enter content, lists of artifacts, and lists of references into the Item Content section. Title the item Standard 1 or whichever standard you are working on. Look at mine first to see how it should look before you delete anything. You must have the structure set up by January 24th.

Optional but recommended: Read the brief article on Graduate Student Perspectives on the Development of Electronic Portfolios in the Resource section.
